LO to write a persuasive letter

My cave
Kensuke's Island
Atlantic Ocean

Dear Kensuke Ogawa,

Have you ever felt sad, lonely and confused? Have you ever felt like you have nothing to do but worry? If you have then you will know exactly how I feel now. My only hope to survive is to stay on this island and to be your friend. If you don't let me stay on this glorious island you will be haunted with unbearable, tormenting guilt. This is the only chance you will get to make a life long friend. You must accept my plea. If you still don't want me to stay then read on and maybe you will let me stay. So, please read on.

I am undoubtedly sorry that you lost Japanese friends and family because of mean, vicious and cruel Americans. I am not an American and I would like to redeem my friendship with you. I believe very strongly that you and me can be best of friends. I feel like you are my family now. I feel like you are a father to me as you are keeping me alive and giving me food and water. I want to live with you and be like a real family. I want to paint with you and craft with you. I want to always have you in my heart and mind and I want to always be in yours.

Please let me stay. Please I will teach you so many things. Please I will give you the gift of English. I would love to teach you English and in return you could teach me Japanese so that we can communicate better and much, much clearer. It will be extremely easier to understand each other. This is the only chance you will get to learn English as England is very far away. I mean you might get an Australian person but you won't get an English person like me as not that many people go on a voyage and get thrown off board so you would throw away a massive opportunity.

I will move mountains to make you allow me to stay with you and make you teach me how to paint with your careful touch and deep concentration. I think you are artistic, creative and imaginative and you are absolutely the greatest artist in the entire world. I want to become your apprentice so I can show everyone if I get home what has happened in your styled, detailed pictures that you I learnt from you to show what a great artist you were. And if I ever go home I will paint a self-portrait of myself and give it to you so that you will always remember me.

To sum up, please let me stay and surely you will let me teach you how to speak English and you teach me how to speak Japanese and how to paint. The island needs us and not letting a lost little soul like me stay on your lush island is really mean. So if you will let me stay then put a note next to my daily ration of food. So please let me stay and we can make a whole new life together with Stella and the orang-utans. You will never forget your old family but I won't forget mine but please let me stay and we can love each other like family. Please.

Dear Michael,

I would like to give you some reasons why you should stay on Kensuke's island. Kensuke can teach you all sorts of different things so how to cook, how to survive and more even paint! And we two both know Kensuke is very old, but a nice, calm guy. You just need to trust him. Then you will get used to him in no-time.

Kensuke is the best team-mate to working together and in fact, you can teach him too! You two together would have sooo much fun. All the things he'd done for you don't you think he deserves something? do you really want to betray him? Have a think of all the things you could do and spend time on together.

Can you imagine Kensuke has been on that island for forty years! (ON HIS OWN) and just one single person makes him have such a wonderful, joy-ful feeling.

All these NEW things he can teach you and you just want to leave? Kensuke feels that you're like a son to him. Remind yourself of all the fun and funny times you and him have had together and you may even have more. But wait, do you really want to leave him now? Think of how he will feel just think! Do you, yes you, want to leave?...

Concluding:)

Just before you leave think about the things you may have with Kensuke. Think about his tears trying to keep up in his eyes think about his emotions, his laugh, his smile. He couldn't believe what a joyous thing had happened in his life and now it will be gone. He will feel heart-broken. You are like a family now. Think of the things Kensuke will have to get through and what he already had.

Yours Sincerely,
Neila Mackowska
